SUPREME COURT REFUSES WRITS IN MORSE CASE

NEW YORK FINANCIER MUST GO TO PRISON FOR 15 YEARS.

LADYSMITH CASE IS UP

Reverses Decision of Judge Sanborn
—Gomperz Case to Go to Highest Court.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—The supreme court of the United States today denied the petition of Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, for a writ of certiorari. The result of this decision is to leave in effect against Morse the sentence of fifteen years' imprisonment.

The Ladysmith Case.
The supreme court also decided the case of the currency in the hands of the government with power to examine into the affairs of national banks.

The Case.
John A. Corbett, cashier of the First National bank of Ladysmith, Wyo., and others connected with the bank, were indicted on the charge of making false entries in their report to the comptroller.

Were Discharged.
The United States district court of the western district of Wisconsin dismissed the complaint on the ground that the comptroller was not an examiner as contemplated by the statutes. The supreme court, however, failed to sustain that view.

Granted Petition.
The supreme court also granted the petition for a writ of certiorari in the contempt cases of Gomperz, Morrison and Mitchell. This will bring the entire record in the Bucks case and range case to the supreme court for review.

INQUIRY DEVELOPS VIOLATIONS OF LAW

Cherry Illinois Mine Had Many Direct Violations of the State Law.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Cherry, Ill., Dec. 6.—Just what constitutes the main shaft of a mine whether it be a shaft little used or one by which the main work is carried on will have an important bearing in fixing the responsibility for the recent mine horror. Direct charges that the intent of the law must be provided that the air shaft of a mine must be removed from the main shaft at least at a distance of 300 feet, was violated here by the Cherry mine.

One of the most important causes of the disaster, it is alleged lay in the use of the two shafts in the Cherry mine. The main shaft, although sunk to the level of the third vein was not used as a main shaft below the second vein. The only means of access to the third vein by way of the main shaft lay in a small cage which was attached to the main cage by a cable and which, thus suspended from the main cage or lifts, was drawn up and down between the two veins. The main entrance to the third vein was by the cage which operated only between the second and third veins in the combined escape and air shaft. It was in this shaft, cut off from the air shaft only by a thin wood partition that practically all the work of the lower vein was done.

On this cage the men were taken back and forth, the coal mined in the lower vein was brought up, rolled off the cage at the second vein, hauled around the handways to the main shaft, reloaded on the large cages and so taken above ground. Another charge the miners are making is that the stairway in the escape shaft reached only to the top or roof of the third vein and was reached by means of a 20-foot ladder. The officials say that such a means of egress would be useless in times of stress or panic.

Zelaya offers to resign but revolutionists refuse to accept anything short of surrender.

American warships ordered to Nicaraguan ports to protect American interests and citizens.
Two Americans slaughtered.

By FRED E. FISHER.

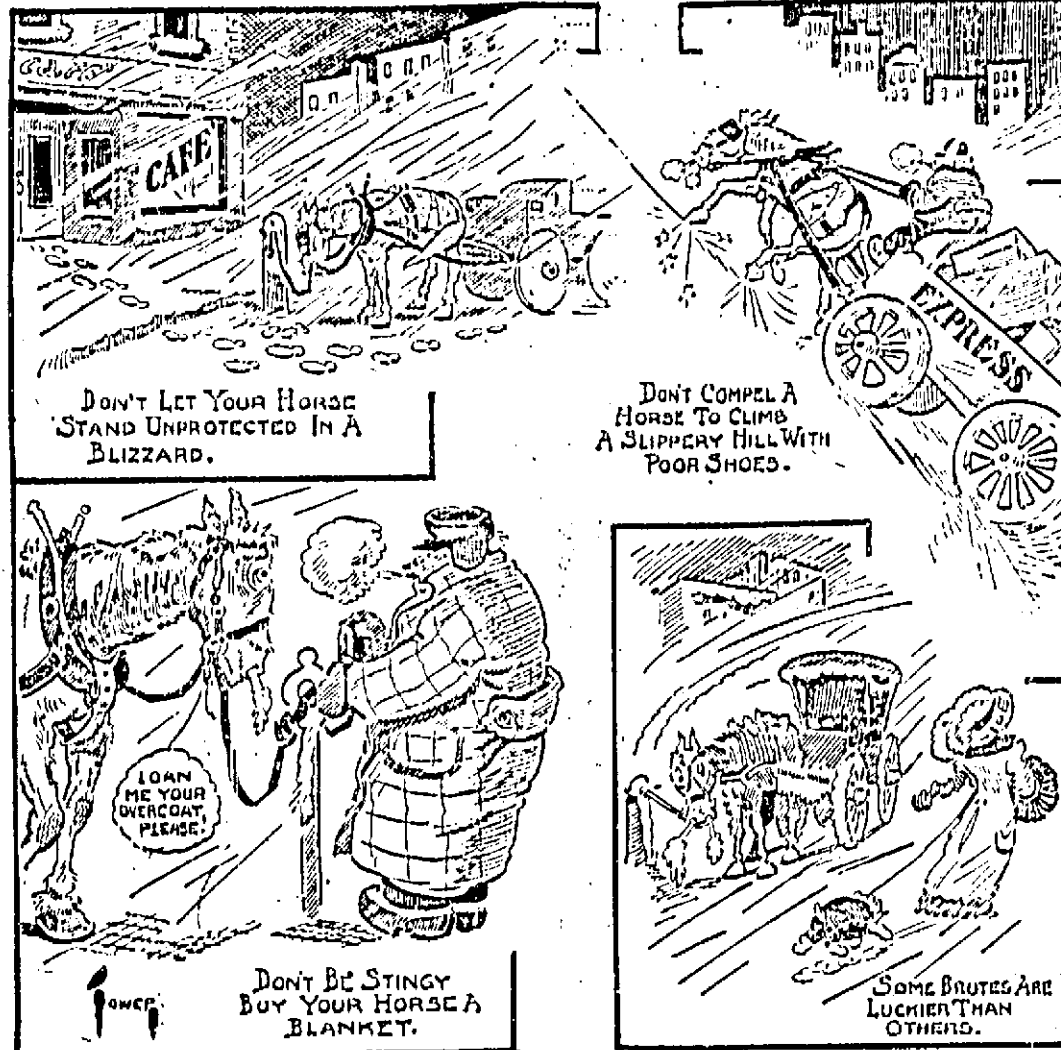

Washington, D. C., Dec. 6.—One shot fired by either American or Nicaraguan troops at this crisis in the negotiations at the state department will answer the eternal question that closes the parallel outlined above. In the name of the tyrant-killers, Creoles, Indians and half-breeds of Nicaragua, whose homes have been burned, whose families have been starved and outraged by the armies of Zelaya, who are fighting and dying for freedom, American warships, armed with the latest and the most powerful of the world's armaments, will be ordered to the bay of the world's most humanitarian people of all the ages.

Every move made by the United States in the controversy with Nicaragua points to the downfall of this troublesome republic and the establishment of a provisional government to be maintained until the nation is able to govern itself. Right now is the psychological time for a serious clash, not unlike the blowing up of the Maine in the harbor of Havana. The game of American battleships are crowning on the coast cities of Nicaragua, the officials at Washington have decided on a definite policy and any moment an explosion may be expected which will precipitate another epoch-making period in American history.

President Taft holds the same hand in the Nicaraguan game that President McKinley held when he sent his burning special message to congress that led to the Spanish-American war. Taft, although not a rabid imperialist, holds to broad humanitarian views and a step in this direction would be in keeping with his other policies.

The murder of Gruen and Cannon, two American citizens, the cry of the oppressed and struggling natives under the lash of Zelaya, the refusal of the Nicaraguan president to treat with the state department, calls for a string special message to congress, asking for the seizure of this republic. This would be the first step in a new governmental policy embracing the ultimate seizure of the reins of government in all the Central American republics and the restoring of order and establishment of one protectorate.

Opposition from the powers could come from only two sources, Japan and Germany. Germany's interests, it is rumored, lie in the desire to secure

ONE JURYMAN HALTS THE HEDGER TRIAL

Prosecuting Attorney Claims He Had Formed an Opinion on
the Case.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 6.—The entire jury in the case of Ward E. Hedger, charged with the murder of his wife, was excused by Judge John C. Ludwig shortly before noon today following charges made against William A. Schenck by District Attorney August C. Buckus. The dismissal of the jury will mean that an entire new panel will be drawn up, that the entire case must be reopened from the beginning.

Representation of the qualifications as a jury were charged against Schenck by Mr. Buckus. It was alleged that he had expressed an opinion of the guilt of Hedger and that he was biased and sworn in as last jury man in the murder case. The accusation and its development brought the Hedger trial to an abrupt halt.

SALEM, OREGON VOTES ON MUNICIPAL BAND QUESTION

Citizens Of the City To Decide By Ballot Whether City Shall Pay For Music Or Not.

Salem, Ore., Dec. 6.—One of the interesting questions at issue in the city election in Salem today was the proposal to levy a special tax for the maintenance of a municipal band. If the proposal carries, a fund of $3,000 will be created for the support of the musical organization, which, in addition to being subject to the call of the mayor on special occasions, will furnish free concerts during the summer months. It is believed that it will be the first city band in the country.

ITALIAN SECTION MEN HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Pumped Their Hand Car Directly Into Passenger Train at Academy Street Crossing.

Three Italian section men had a narrow escape this noon while pumping a hand car east on the main line of the Chicago & North-Western railway at the Academy street crossing. Unluckily, after the typical Italian manner, they worked the handcar near just as they rounded the corner near McGinnis' warehouse. They saw the engine on train 541 looming up above them. One of them perceived their danger and with a yell of warning, jumped. The other two also managed to get away in safety but without a second to spare. The train is due here at 12:35, but was an hour late today and pulled into the station faster than usual.

FEDERAL COURT IN TOLEDO TO HEAR OF "BLACK HAND" GANG.

BAND TERRORIZED MANY

And Extorted Large Sums Of Money
From Victims—Members Said To Know Something Of Petrosini's Assassination.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Toledo, O., Dec. 6.—The term of the Federal court which convenes in this city tomorrow will be made notable by the trial of a dozen or more alleged members of the notorious band of Black Hand assassins, known as the Society of the Banana, who are declared to have been extorting large sums of money from terrified victims in towns and cities of Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Indiana and New York for at least two years past. The postal inspectors who have been gathering evidence in the cases for many months say they have no doubt of securing the conviction of every Italian under arrest.

John Amison, a wealthy produce dealer of Columbus, will be the principal witness for the government, the case having been woven around threatening Black Hand letters addressed to him. Last January Amison and his brother, who is a member of his firm, found a dynamite bomb on their porch, with the following letter wrapped around it: "Mr. John and Charlie."

"We wish $10,000, $5,000 from each. Therefore search for friends to bring this sum to Pittsburgh at once, if you value your life. This which you found is a sample, but if you go to the police you are lost. Therefore consult with the other members of the family before you act for the law cannot watch you the year around. Therefore do not confide in any one, but think of your wives and children. THE EXTERMINATION."

Subsequent to the receipt of the bomb John Amison received more letters with demands and threats, which were mailed at Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. Instead of disposing of his business and fleeing the country, as other victims of the Black Hand gang are known to have done, Amison promptly communicated with the Italian ambassador. The latter placed the matter in the hands of the United States postal inspectors, who promptly went to work on the case.

It was learned by the inspectors that similar threats had been made against wealthy Italian merchants in Dayton, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and other cities. They learned also that after the receipt of each letter by Amison, Salvatore Ventola of Columbus and Salvatore and Antonio Lima of Marion would appear at Amison's place of business and, remain in the vicinity several days, possibly to learn if Amison had selected the two friends to take the $10,000 demanded to "Pittsburg."

As a result of this information, by clever detective work the inspectors ascertained that Lima, with his friends had organized a society known as the "Society of the Banana," with branches in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Marion, and with affiliations among notorious Italians in Chicago, Buffalo and other cities.

Early last June a general conference of the postal inspectors was held, and skilled men went to Columbus, Marion, Bellefontaine, Cleveland and Dayton, and with search warrants swooped down upon the unsuspecting conspirators, taking possession of all books and papers found on their premises, together with a great mass of correspondence. It was found that the Black Hands suspected one of their members, for a letter was found addressed to him informing him it was his time to die for informing the police, and he would shortly feel a bullet in his stomach. Not only was a vast amount of incriminating evidence found, but also large quantities of the very paper that had been used in sending the threatening letters.

A startling fact in connection with the case is the statement made that two of the members of the band, who are among those under arrest, were in Palermo, Sicily, when Lieut. Petrosino of the New York police force was murdered. They returned immediately afterward. It is claimed they know who killed him, and have been sending over money for the defense of the assassin. A letter is alleged to have been found on one of the suspects referring to a graphic manner to a street scene in Sicily that might easily have been the one in which Lieut. Petrosino was killed.

The star shows the only means of transportation from third level in main shaft. A rope led to the bottom of the car hoisted a bucket to second level. This rope could only be tied by miners on second level and was of no use when the fire occurred, as it was not attached. Pipes and obstructions are alleged to have blocked the main passageway of the second level. The law requires that this be kept open. At the foot of the third level is shown the 20 foot movable ladder which led to the wooden struts. Number two shows where 18 bodies were found. Number five shows the main shaft of the mine, the cage and the tipples. Number five shows the air shaft and number six the holding shaft. These two shafts are said to have been separated by a two-inch partition. The law requires that they be separated 300 feet. Number eight shows where cage stuck when sliding warped. From cage Arrow shows where cage was thrown down shaft in third level and cross indicates where it caught fire from a torch.

WORK OF CHURCH
VERY IMPORTANT

ITS DUTIES TO THE COMMUNITY
ARE NUMEROUS.

SHOULD TAKE ITS PART

In the Business, Intellectual and Social Life of the City and Mold Character of Young People.

"This church is here to do things in the business, social and intellectual life of the people." These words were the keynote of the sermon by Dr. David Deaton at the Congregational church last evening on the subject, "What the Church Owe to the Community." The sermon last evening was supplemental to the one delivered two weeks before on "The Christian Minister and His Message."

DR. DAVID DEATON, NEW PASTOR OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

ministry is not of a man set apart to do unusual things but one who does his work because he represents the church. The largest things he does are done because he is a representative of a great institution.

"I am nervous when I speak before a learned and intelligent audience and in this church the people are as brainy as the average. In Chicago when I was preaching in the Lincoln Park church I noticed one Sunday two men sitting in one of the pews, two of the greatest engineers in the country, and I wondered what I could say that would appeal to them. Then I thought, 'Is the power in the church?' In any congregation, with the education that the children receive, there is a great untrained spiritual and moral power that might be used for good in the community."

"There is a great force in the Protestant movement in the church itself. What is meant when I say, 'What should the Church do for the Community?' The reply you would probably receive should you ask would be, 'The preaching of the Truth.' We have a splendidly equipped church here, yet if you ask the people of the community to your services they think that you want them to come and hear a minister preach your own particular brand of creed. We are not banded together to preach a narrow dogmatism—to force our beliefs onto the people. We are banded here by force of the great convictions in our hearts."

"It is not a man's convictions that he is judged by; it is his deeds. We have our faith and hopes and plans for doing good, but we must bring our hopes and beliefs into form of service before they are of any avail. It was not through his convictions that Jesus fed the hungry, healed the sick, and performed the other great miracles that he did."

"What service is this church rendering to the community? The church is a great institution, ranking the same as the colleges and schools. It is not for the purpose of making money, but ranks with the art galleries, and proceeds to minister to the community in its own peculiar way. The church building is the property or capital you invest. If there are sixty or a hundred thousands of dollars invested the institution must render some economic service to the community. The Christian church that is doing its work renders a service to the business and commercial interests of the city. In what way does the church render service to the business interests? Through its influence. In a community where the saloons are in power and the basest element prevails you appreciate why property values do not want to settle there. On the other hand a community where the Christian people are and law and order prevail, you will find will be the one that will be sought out."

"Another service the church renders to the community is through its members. The Christian man pays one hundred cents on the dollar. The preaching of the gospel is a paying proposition. It means that the people of the community are reliable business men. It means that the young men and boys educated in the church are going to amount to something. The business men want boys that are honest and reliable; boys with integrity. One thing the church especially has to do is to produce from the raw material found in these boys and girls the character that will make them noble men and women.

"Suppose a young man in the city is ambitious; he has inventive genius but needs help. Where is he going to get it? In the saloons and pool-rooms? No! The place for him to receive aid is from the church and those connected with it."

"Do you say it is wrong for a man to get the advantages of business life through the church? No! Providing you do not carry it too far."

"Encourage local trade. In our Dakota village we were starting a college and there was some question as to where the wives of the professors should buy their dresses. Some maintained that the local stores were unable to supply their wants, but I entered into the debate and said: 'If you do not tell them what your wants are and help them, how can they get what you want?' There is the basic fact that the Christian man has a real

a certain service to the literary artistic and industrial interests of the community. Your boys and girls have as much talent as much as other children but where they are going to get inspiration for their talent if not here. This place ought to be filled at least once a month with young people to hear some great interpretation of the Master's gospel. Music is one of the great means for the civilization of the people and we ought to be teaching the people how to appreciate music. The church should furnish the community with noble and recreation."

The church should perform a social service. This is the place where the young people should find the noblest and most inspiring companions. I would rather have young men and women meet in the church than in the dance hall. I want the inspiration of Christianity on the comradeship of the young people. There are more tragedies in life that come through the uneven mating of young people, of young men and women who have nothing in common than from any other source. If the church does her duty, it should offer the young people the opportunity of social companionship."

"This church is here to do things. It should take its place in the business recreations, and social life and in the homes of the people."

DARIEN BLIND PIGS RAIDED SATURDAY

Walworth Co. Officers Led by Temperance Editor Took Drayload of Liquor from Darien Hotel.

(Special to this Gazette.)
Beloit, Wis., Dec. 3.—Led by Editor W. C. Damp of the Beloit Citizen-Advocate, the temperance newspaper, Walworth county officers Saturday night made a raid on several supposed "blind pigs" at Darien and arrested five men followed, and a drayload of beer and whiskey was taken from the Darien hotel. The men arrested were Phil, Nehlig and son, proprietors of the Darien hotel, Frank Hunsbush and the two Langdon brothers. The officers say that the places of Hunsbush and Langdon brothers evidently received a tip about the raid while it was going on at the hotel, for the places were empty and little liquor was found there. A poker game was going on at the hotel and among the players, who it is said will be called as a witness, was former Assemblyman D. P. Clough. Darien voted "dry" last spring, but there has been little evidence of a great drought there, and detectives have worked up strong cases against several who have been selling liquor.

The liquor seized was sent to Elkhorn and the men arrested are to appear today for examination at Elkhorn before Judge J. P. Lyon. Editor Damp says that the raid will surely get several law-breakers into trouble and that the campaign against the illegal sale of liquor will be pushed.

Prof. Ray Abram Taylor, organist and professor of music of Beloit college gave the inaugural recital on the new organ of the Clason Avenue Presbyterian church in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 1. The organ is one of the finest in New England. Professor Taylor is having a vacation in the east.

Discussed Shop Conditions.
Prof. R. C. Chapin, who has gained distinction as a writer on social and industrial problems, gave the first of a series of talks on the shops and the shop man at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday. He discussed the economy and wisdom of having ideal places for men to work, and the following lectures will deal with practical subjects of interest to working men and employers.

Trinity Norwegian Lutheran church is celebrating Forefather Day with special services and social meetings.

L. W. Thompson, for many years manager of the Beloit Lumber company, has severed his connection with the company and will become connected with the P. N. Gardner Manufacturing company, a thriving machinery manufacturing company.

FOUR RAILWAY BROTHERHOODS
MAY BE DRAWN INTO STRIKE
Employees of 32 Eastern Roads to Ask for Raise—Not Connected With Switchmen's Strike.
Independent of the switchmen's strike, the four railway brotherhoods, representing thirty-two eastern roads, will demand an increase in wages amounting to ten per cent, time and a half for overtime, and double time for holidays and Sundays. This demand will be made at the end of this week and it is thought that the increase will be granted. If not, it is probable that every brotherhood man in the east as well as those employed in the terminal yards at Chicago, will walk out. It is not hard to imagine the condition of affairs if this should take place.

Although considerable space has been devoted to the statements of officials who claim that traffic is now moving at a normal rate in the northwest, in spite of heavy snows, these claims are in accord with reports of trainmen who have seen the conditions there. The crew on second 51 which came through here this morning at 9:30, state that it took over three hours to run about two miles in the St. Paul yards.

MANY CARS WERE SENT OUT AT NEW YARDS YESTERDAY

There were not many signs of a "strike" at the new yards yesterday although the road did a big "stroke" of business. Fifteen extras, twelve of them to the south, were sent out during the twenty-four hours, an aggregate of 350 cars. There were eight south-bound engines on the board this morning.

ROAD PAYS WELL TO HAVE ROUND HOUSE IN COUNTRY

That the road is paying well for the privilege of having the round-house three miles in the country, is shown by the statement that the increased expense amounts to about twenty dollars a day. This amount includes the extra cost of dispatching, fuel, oil, etc. Even for a big corporation like the North-Western, $7,300 a year is an item of expense that merits attention.

According to a bulletin issued by Master Mechanic F. W. Peterson of the Northern Wisconsin division, the steam pressure on class 2, or Pacific coast type of engines, should not exceed 170 pounds, while 190 is the limit for class 1.

Heavy storms and deep snow in the northwest delayed nearly all the south-bound morning passengers today. In addition to the passengers, several regular freight trains were held up along the line. Train 322 in particular was nearly four and a half hours late.

Engineer Corder with engine 245 had eleven cars in second 534 this morning.

Engineer Yates and Fireman Dalton went south with 1600 tons in an extra yesterday afternoon with engine 1170 on account of pool crows resting.

Engineer Cole is relieving James Walsh on 521 and 514 today.

Fireman W. M. Smith reported for work on the 6 a. m. switch-engine this morning. Wilkins, who has been relieving him, went on the board.

Engineer Starrett dispatched last night in place of Charles Yates.

Engineer Talmadge returned to work on the 6 a. m. switch-engine this morning. Engineer Dudley, who relieved him, went on the board.

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.
Engineer Higgins and Fireman Hummel double-headed 21 out this morning with engine 1371.

Engineer Wilkinson and Fireman Rooney took an extra west last night at nine o'clock with engine 850.

Engineer Cornelius took an extra west at 11:30 this morning with engine 1620.

Fireman Soltz went out on 31 this morning with Engineer Meyer.

Engineer Schlecker and Fireman Shuh took an extra west at 12 o'clock yesterday with engine 179.

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN

David Jayne Hill, noted as a diplomat, delivered an address, the other night, before the Economic club of New York. His audience was composed of more than a thousand of the best financiers and businessmen in the city, and a liberal sprinkling of senators and representatives from Washington.

In looking over this distinguished company, impressed with the importance of the work being accomplished, he was prompted to ask this question, "What would happen if all the men present tonight were removed before the opening of business tomorrow?" The Wall Street Journal, in commenting, says:

"It was a formidable question. Mr. Morgan was sitting just below him. There must have been a score of the leading bankers of New York within a radius of fifty feet. Heads of a dozen industrial corporations were scattered about the room. The crowd was thick with chiefs of departments of the kind who make themselves inevitably above the rank of the rest of the employes by the force of sheer intelligence. There was hardly a man in the room who was not of proved merit in his own line. Such a contingency as the ambassador contemplated might well stultify the commercial and industrial business of the country."

"Our tendency has been to create a better machine in industrial production and commercial expansion, and to do it we have had to educate a distinctly higher type of intelligence. The machine is something, but when all is said and done the intelligence is everything. We can formulate economic laws or trace clearly economic tendencies, but so far from creating a situation where the economic law will decide and the individual become merely a part of the machine, the exact contrary has been the case. Never was the individual so important as he is today."

"For the old cut-throat competition which was the commercial and industrial ideal of the Manchester school of economists of the last half of the nineteenth century, we have substituted a system of regulating production and of systematizing the law of supply and demand in a way which John Stuart Mill could never have conceived, to say nothing of earlier economists. The laws are still there, but increasing intelligence has converted them from relentless engines of destruction to efficient instruments of progress and prosperity."

"It is to be hoped that there is enough of this kind of educated thought in the country to supply even the places of the distinguished companies at the Hotel Astor on Monday night. We are all too apt to see the evil in what we call the 'trusts.' We are all too slow to realize how beneficent their work may be, under enlightened administration."

"This is a timely statement of a great truth too often overlooked. The rapid development of industries and transportation has tended to encourage the notion that those improvements come as a matter of course, and but little thought is given to the men whose brains and energy has worked out the transformation."

Of course money enters into the problem, but money in itself is more helpless than the man with a pick, and it is only vitalized when men

with brain and ability influence investment.

Back of every factory whistle, and back of every railroad which contributes to the network of transportation, reaching out to every nook and corner of the land, is the man behind the gun.

He may be hated as cleverly as a Rockefeller or a Harriman, but he is there with the goods, and prosperity is generally shared in spite of the hatred.

If all of these great financiers should drop out at once it would indeed be a great calamity, and all the reformers and much-misled in the land would be helpless in attempting to pick up the burden.

It requires hard common sense, a level head, and broad intelligence, coupled with ability, and disposition to do things. Any kind of a pinhead can criticize. The nation is long just now on pinheads.

THE RECALL

In discussing the commission plan of government, recall is sometimes expressed that the recall feature, which is a part of the Iowa law, is omitted from the Wisconsin measure. This omission was not an oversight, as the question was freely discussed in the legislature, and the "recall" left out because the lawmakers regarded it an element of weakness.

To any far-sighted man, not influenced by prejudice, the fact will be recognized that a commission to accomplish results must have the moral support of the community. If good is to be accomplished, many radical changes will be made in handling the city's business, and these changes will very naturally make some enemies.

Suppose, for instance, that the commission should decide to adopt the Iowa plan in regulating the saloon business. This would offend the saloon men and a petition would be secured demanding the recall of the mayor; then a man would be elected, and his hands would be tied from the start so as dealing with the saloon business is concerned.

What is true of the saloon is true of some other things which need regulating, and which if touched by a commission would result in a recall. It is a perilous feature, and the Wisconsin lawmakers were wise in leaving it out.

Pear is expressed that had men might be elected, but that is a groundless fear. Janesville has 2,500 taxpayers, and they can be trusted to elect good men to manage their business, and administer the city's affairs. The Gazette has no axes to grind, no candidates for office, no friends to reward nor enemies to punish. The paper favors the law because it believes that the interests of Janesville will be greatly enhanced, and public welfare promoted through a concrete business administration, and this is what the commission plan provides.

The state of Iowa abandoned statewide prohibition after becoming convinced that the law was a failure because it could not be enforced. The state is now under local option and strict regulation, under what is known as the "Atlet" law. Saloons have no screens, no backdoors and no seats for loafers. They close at 10 o'clock and are not open on Sunday. The people have discovered that regulation which regulates is better than prohibition which fails to prohibit.

Statistics recently compiled show that Wisconsin has 113 cities, 182 villages, and 528 towns where licenses are granted, and 10 cities, 51 villages and 252 towns that voted "dry." Of the entire population 1,641,149 are in "wet" territory and 270,100 in "dry" territory, aside from 300,000 in county districts where license was not an issue. This would indicate that the temperance people have still much work to do.

The young ladies of Temple Emmanuel church, Chicago, proposed to aid in clearing up a $5,000 debt by running a bazaar at a church bazaar. Bazaars were to be held in unlimited quantities at 50 cents per, and refreshments were held every evening. But now sorrow and disappointment has taken the place of enthusiasm, for the mothers and maidens objected so strenuously that the scheme was abandoned.

Judge Grosscup of Chicago has joined the ranks of the insurgents, and is prepared to aid in a political revolution, to the extent of aiding in the organization of a new party, if he deems it necessary. Another good man gone wrong. The only way to effectively reform a party is by work within its ranks. The man on the outside may be a disturber, but his influence is likely to be nil.

The Little Red Cross Christmas stamps are on sale at ten places in the city. Don't fail to call for them with your Christmas packages. Every penny invested will be used in fighting the white plague in Wisconsin. The work of distributing these stamps is purely a work of philanthropy. No commissions are paid, and no one is looking for profits in the transactions.

Bryan is ready to form an alliance with the prohibition party, and will attempt to carry his following with him. If he expects the rank and file of democracy to join the procession he has another think coming. While the old democratic party possesses some graces, it has never been noted for total abstinence.

Conscience, the silent voice, which always says, "Do right," prompted a man to send thirty cents to the passenger department of a Chicago railroad, the other day, in payment for a ticket overlooked by a conductor 25 years ago.

Perry has sold his alleged trip to the North pole to "Hampton's" for $50,000 or at the rate of from $120 a word up. Cook is still in hiding. He disposed of his warren early in the game at a less profitable figure. Now you see him and now you don't.

There are at least three very good reasons why the commission plan of government should be adopted in Janesville—the Milwaukee Journal opposes it, the saloons oppose it, and the Recorder opposes it.

The Success magazine has joined the ranks of the much-misled, and in attempting to discredit Taft and his administration, many oldtime readers are disappointed.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

WOULD YOU TRADE?

A recent play presents this social problem: Would the average couple of middle age, if divorce could be procured without scandal or publicity, remain married?

Or, to put the matter personally, would you trade your wife or husband if you had the chance?

Rather impatient, you say? Rather, yes, but the contemplation may be worth while. You have been married, say, fifteen or twenty years. There have doubtless been times when you have wondered why you selected your partner, or all persons. There have possibly been times when, deeply provoked, you have felt that if some mysterious dispensation of Divine Providence should remove your mate you would not mourn as those without hope.

Honest, now? Human nature is human nature. At the same time some turn of the domestic life would reveal to you the tremendous strength of the bond that binds you together.

The absent cure is sometimes a good one. When the monotony of matrimony gets on your nerves, go away for a few weeks. During the first few days you may feel an agreeable sense of freedom. Then that bond that mysteriously binds you to another begins to pull. Your hearstrings grow very tender.

You begin to realize how necessary to your true life is the complement of yourself. You are tied together by a thousand intimate tendrils. The habit of the dual life, long continued, is not easily shaken off. You have lived long together and have become used to each other. More than you realize, your ways have become alike.

And there is the past with its memories. Think of the team work, the striving, the planning, the saving, you have done together. Together you have succeeded, or failed. Together you have laughed and wept.

Together you have sat through the long night watches and looked through your tears at a little pale face. Together you have turned away from an open grave.

Together, sharing common hopes and fears, joys and sorrows, nothing can blot out the recollections. They are part of eternity.

No, madam; your husband may not be the hero you dreamed of. And, man, your wife may not be the model you wanted. But—

That other self is DEARER and NEARER to you THAN ANY OTHER BEING EVER CAN BE.

Would you trade?

If you did and then told the truth about it you would soon want to trade back.

Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER

By WALT MASON (Copyright, 1909, by George M. Shaw Adams.)

The year's growing season, and weary and gray; full soon he will cash in, and money away. A while yet he'll totter along to his grave; he's marked for the slaughter, and nothing can save. The year that is leaving seems weighted with woe; and Nature is groaning because he must go. The forests are shivering and moaning all day; the night winds are crying, upon their sad way; the gray clouds are taking a threatening shape; the dead grass is shuddering like billows of grief. Dime Nature is tender, and dimes she'll cry, regretting the splendor and glory of June; she knows that tomorrow the old year will sleep; she knows that the sorrow of parting is deep. In this world, O never can friends with us stay! Some loved one forever is going away! And that is the story of people and years; a morning of glory, an evening of tears; an hour of increasing a call at the dawn, a prayer and a blessing, and then they are gone.

16 MORE SHOPPING DAYS BEFORE CHRISTMAS

WINTER'S SUPPLY IS STOLEN FROM STORE

Flour, Sugar, Tobacco, Shoes and Even a Whole Hog Taken Saturday Night at Johnston.

Some time after midnight, Saturday, two thieves broke into Ludolph Lorkio's store at Johnston and secured a winter's supply of flour, sugar, tobacco and shoes and then adjourned to Herman Schmalling's, where the hog that had been killed Saturday, was hanging, and added this to their winter's supply of food. The loss at the store was not discovered until Sunday afternoon and from the appearance of the building it was evident that two men had done the work and that they had wanted considerable besides what they carried off. Nine sacks of flour were missed as well as about a barrel of sugar, five pounds of tobacco, good heavy winter shoes and perhaps some minor trifles that suited the thieves' fancy. Mr. Schmalling had killed a fine hog on Saturday and it was hanging outside his home, which is near the store, and this was also taken. From the amount of the plunder received it is evident the men must have had a wagon to haul it away with. The store was not closed until nearly midnight. The thieves gained an entrance over a back window which had been left unlocked. Suspicious points to several suspects and Mr. Lorkio believes he can discover the thieves.

Just To Make Two Words Mean Something

Many manufacturers give little attention to holding old customers, while they strain and struggle and strive to get new ones.

For a long time automobile manufacturers thought it was a useless expense to "bother about the fellow who already owned one of their cars."

Now the keen auto man "has seen a bright light"—and knows that a dissatisfied user is the Best Possible Buyer for a car of another make—a liability instead of an asset.

The wise manufacturer must not only deliver a perfected product, but he must guard against accidents, against the results of carelessness—he must, with all his resources, insure interrupted service to his customer.

That is the new way.

LET US SEE WHAT IT MEANS

We have believed, ever since we started to sell adding machines in 1892 that our best class of Future Buyers were our Old Customers.

In the intervening years we have not had a good reason to change that belief.

It costs a good deal more to-day to live up to that belief than it did in 1892.

But when all manufacturers develop their business on that principle, selling expenses will be cut, for when the man around the corner tells the Possible Buyer, "The manufacturer of my machine takes care of me," the salesman's work is easier.

Thus "once a user always a friend" is worth organizing, striving and spending money to make a reality.

It costs us quite $300,000 a year to show how much we believe in this idea. If you take care of your users, your sales will come easier.

"Yet it would cost us so much more not to do it that we don't count it a virtue, but accept it as just good business."

Here's what this means to you as a possible buyer of a Burroughs—to buy not only a machine, but service, uninterrupted service; i. e., the uninterrupted use of your investment day in and out for a business life-time.

You buy an adding machine—you put it to a few simple uses.

It pays—you can see the time, work and money it saves. You are enthusiastic—you write an endorsement. We might be satisfied with that endorsement. But that represents past performance—which is but a promise of what it will do—we want to insure that promise.

The world of business, even among men, has hardly commenced to realize a fraction of the possible uses to which a Burroughs may be put.

Therefore, a salesman drops in some day and shows you a new System that a User in your line of business has devised. It saves a little more time and work and worry—and money—for you.

That salesman doesn't try to sell you anything; just wants to give you something, so you'll have more use for the machine you have.

He wants to make you better pleased with your purchase, that is all.

He wants you to be a booster—and a reference—so he goes out of his way to show how more of your work can be done on the machine, how much it can be shortened.

Of course that service pays us—and it takes experience, organization, money to maintain it.

This company stands alone in offering such a service.

AN ACCIDENT HAPPENS

Suppose an accident happens—some day the office boys fall to scuffling during office hours.

Dang! Crash!—over goes the adding machine.

Tomorrow is statement day—Pretty bad!

"Where's the adding machine man?"

Service counts here, if it does anywhere.

There's a Burroughs man right at the end of your telephone wire, scattered in ninety-seven branch offices, in all parts of the United States and Canada.

"Let your Burroughs fall?" he says. "Too bad; I'll send you another while we are fixing up the old one. Certainly—Burroughs service, that's all—right away."

The loan machine is sent that day—and you get your statements out on time.

The injured machine is examined by a factory-trained expert. If possible it is repaired at the Branch office.

But the important thing to remember is—you have been cared for—your work has not suffered.

After such an exhibition of interest and attention, will you say a good word about the Burroughs to Jones & Co., who are thinking of buying an adding machine? You bet your life you will—two good words. That is where this service pays us.

WE PROTECT EVERY USER

But you are not a machinist.

Adding machines are machinery—just like your typewriter—needing a little oil and a tooth-brush once in a while.

Some never get either—and yet they do their work; but that isn't fair to the machine.

We don't depend entirely on you to give the machine this attention.

We protect every user against imperfect parts—guaranteeing them for a period of one year after purchase. During that time our representatives visit you—carefully inspect and test the machine—to see if it is living up to our standard, i. e., uninterrupted service. We know, after an experience in handling 5,000 machines (up to April 1, 1909), that if a Burroughs will give you our kind of service for one year, it is good for a business life-time.

Now and then, after the guarantee period expires, you will be called on just to make sure there is no cause for complaint. Probably once a year you will get a letter—a "Service Inquiry" we call it—"Is the Burroughs giving you good service? Has it given you any trouble?"

By this time you probably feel as if you had bought something beside a mere piece of machinery—which feeling makes you a good friend, and you go out of your way to tell Brown & Co. what they could do if they had a Burroughs.

KEEP IN TOUCH WITH IMPROVEMENTS

After a while you get a letter telling you of a new Burroughs, which does twice, four times as many things as your old machine. A salesman calls—demonstrates its application to a lot of new work no adding machine ever did before.

If you will let us have the old machine—many don't—we will make you a generous allowance for it in part payment for the new model, so when you figure the service the old one has rendered, the new one, after all, has cost you nothing.

That, too, is service, for we are constantly employing a big Inventions Department to make adding machines do more than they have ever done before.

The result of this work is always given our old users at a small cost to them.

But it pays us.

PROBABLY YOU WILL SEE

Probably you now see what it means to our users to buy "Burroughs" service.

1. To get the best built adding machine in the world.
2. To be protected from all just causes of complaint.
3. To be insured the uninterrupted service from your investment.

You will realize, therefore how important it is to any buyer of an adding machine considering the first cost, to know how well organized the company making any machine is to take care of him—to insure to him uninterrupted use of his investment.

We would like to show you what this Burroughs Service means in your special case—we want you to test that service—compare it with that of others—and then we will leave it to your own judgment.

NOT ONLY INDIGESTION AND GAS BUT ALL STOMACH DISTRESS GOES

Take a Little Diapopsin Now and Your Stomach Will Feel Fine Five Minutes Later.

If your meals don't sit comfortably or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, burp or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sour your entire mood—interfere with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Diapopsin, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pope's Diapopsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of indigestion. No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drugstore the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pope's Diapopsin will regulate any out of order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

Fable of the High Brow, who almost STOPPED EARLY.

A FABLE OF THE HIGH BROW WHO ALMOST STOPPED EARLY.

In his own little family Circle Bill Sphinx was known as a High Brow. He had befuddled his wife into believing it and even the kids had to stand for a Daily Dissertation on Ladd's Astrucous Psychological Conclusion and Like It. It was noised around Town that Bill was who the Darwin Theory and Ptochology. He also knew how to Garner in the Unpopular Increment whenever that means. One Day Bill told himself he was a Genius and he believed it. There was only one Sun in Bill's sky and that was the Sun of Knowledge. While wondering about things one day he decided that all he needed to make him really Great was to meet some Woman who could break his heart. His own wife was too much of a Front no Sympathy, no Soaring with him to Unknown Heights, no face to Dure and no Done, no only turned Sentences to Tickle his Pride, no Velvet Hand to tickle him under the Chin. It was rough going for Bill. He wanted a Soul Mate, Pittsburgh Men had become famous and Rich after finding their Affinities. Why not Bill Sphinx? He started to look the Field over. He found one. One Eye was out of Plumb, she flumped in the off floor, but her one Good Eye held Bill on tranced. She was the mother of Three little Ones and she worked in the Twelfth Story of a Downtown Office Building. Every Time Bill came down the Elevator he felt more and more the Need of the One Woman in the World to make him really Great. When Bill sprung his Affinity Talk, she listened very attentively. She admired a Man who could speak six Languages, recite Killing and who has seen Three Weeks. Then the High Brow proposed, but of course, the Woman must have Time to Consider Christmas was Coming and Bill saw his Chance to make Good by buying a set of Furs. The next Few Days he became interested in a Volume on "Love's Delny" and neglected to buy his Presents. Then his Wife suggested Early Shopping, but Nothing she said sounded like Music to Bill and he became Rebellious. On the afternoon before Christmas Bill found himself in the Center of an Invading Army. He thought for a Moment he was Uncle Joe Cannon and that the Whole World had become Insurgents. "The Bill's Credit, may it be said, he stuck to his Post of Duty, but there was Little Doing when he reached the Right Counter. The Selection he had in Mind was Gone and every other Selection. Bill wandered all over Town, but all there was left was a Sewing Machine. He gave up, and when he called a Week Later for his Answer, his Wife had eloped with Travelling Man From Kokomo, Indiana. The Note left for him read, "My new Love Shopped Early."

ONE SHOT MIGHT START THE WAR

conditions prevail as obtained when Covera's fleet was blown to atoms. Men who read the future by the events of the past are beginning to ask whether it would not be an humanitarian move on the part of the United States to step into the quarrel among the Central American republics, put an end to the bloody revolutions and establish a protectorate.

In Cuba, it will be recalled, the people were oppressed by the Spanish government. Conditions were so deplorable that no civilized nation could look on without blushing. Murder, rapine and pillage made the suffering island an object of world-wide pity. Today the same conditions prevail in Nicaragua. Under the despotic rule of the tyrant Zelaya the Nicaraguan people are even more helpless than the native Cubans before the Spanish-American war. Zelaya has forced his people to pay constant tribute to enrich his private fortune. While maintaining the semblance of a republic he has ruled without mercy. The Indians, halfbreeds and crooks, ignorant of their own power, have suffered in silence. Finally they turned on their monarch and today are forcing the war to the very gates of the palace.

As before the Spanish-American war the sympathies of the United States had been directed to the Cubans. From pulpit and platform and in the press of the nation the people had heard the story of wrong. The public was fired by a desire to see Cuba free and when war was declared the applause for Uncle Sam's move was almost universal. Today the sympathies of the American people are with the native Nicaraguans and the revolt toward Zelaya has been becoming more bitter ever since the stories of his robberies and oppression were told for the first time.

It will also be remembered that the Spanish government was unable to cope with the situation in Cuba and this is the exact situation in Nicaragua. Then came the overture for peace on the part of Spain just as the offer of Zelaya has been made.

The next move in this parallel case was the dispatching of a warship to Cuba and the blowing up of the Maine in the harbor of Havana. The Nicaragua parallel is found in the execution of two American citizens, George and Cannon. The insult, the threat in the dark, in both cases caused the same feeling to sweep over the United States. Then came the demand on the part of the United States for indemnity. The same demand has been made on Nicaragua. The next move in the Cuban struggle was the declaration of war and the establishing of a protectorate.

Will Uncle Sam intervene in Nicaragua and follow out the policy established after the war with Spain?

Cyclone Hits Terre Haute.
Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 6.—Buildings were unroofed and wrecked by a cyclone which struck the business section of Terre Haute. One person was seriously and a score painfully injured, while the property damage amounted to more than $20,000. The storm passed northeast and the force was spent in Wabash avenue.

"Have you read my last book, Mr. Goodchild?"

MINER KILLED BY BLACK HAND.

Race War Between Italians and Americans Follows Murder.

Marion, Ill., Dec. 6.—Bloodshed and the terrors of a race war between Americans and Italians is imminent throughout Williamson county, following the murder of Luther Williams and the attack upon American residents of Scottsboro by a mob of drunken Italian miners.

Armed mobs are gathering in Marion, Scottsboro and Whitewater, the home of the murdered man. Threats are being openly made that the murder will be avenged if the shooting of every Italian who shows himself is necessary to accomplish it.

The murder and the attack on Scottsboro are laid directly to the dreaded Italian Black Hand society. Letters threatening death have been received by many American residents during the last month.

The body of Williams was found on the road from Marion to Scottsboro. A shot through the heart had killed the victim. His body was slaked horribly.

The attack on Americans began when a mob of nearly a hundred drunken miners surrounded the house of Luke Newton, near Scottsboro, and riddled the frame structure with bullets. Newton was not at home, but his wife and three children were driven from the house in their night clothing.

WILHELMINA GUEST OF EDWARD.

Queen of Holland and Consort Will Visit England.

Rotterdam, Dec. 6.—Queen Wilhelmina and her consort, Prince Henry, started today for their long-planned visit to England. They embarked on King Edward's steam yacht, and are being escorted across the channel by a number of Dutch and British warships.

They will land at Dover, where they will be welcomed by the prince and probably also by the princess of Wales, and will be received in London, at the railroad terminal, by the king and queen, with whom they will proceed to Buckingham palace.

During their three days' stay in London, there is to be a state performance of the opera at Covent garden, a luncheon given in honor of Queen Wilhelmina and of her husband by the lord mayor at the Guildhall, a banquet at Buckingham palace, a dejeuner at the Dutch legation, from London the court will move to Windsor, where the remainder of the visit will be spent. Queen Wilhelmina and her husband taking their departure December 17. From Windsor they will drive over to the palace of Clarence to spend a day with Dowager Queen Emma's sister, the widowed duchess of Albany. The dowager empress and the king and queen of Norway are expected to be at Windsor at the same time, so that the visit will be in every sense of the word a brilliant one.

LAD OF 14 SHOTS PLAYMATE.

Refusing to Take a Dare Youth Fires With Shotgun.

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 6.—"I'm going to shoot both of you," said Clarence Lichty, 14 years old, to his companions, Donald Foster and Carl McCormick, each aged 13, while the three were hunting south of this city. "Blaze away," replied Foster and McCormick. Lichty fired a load of buckshot and brought down both boys. Foster is in a critical condition. McCormick is not seriously hurt.

Bishop Goodsell Dead.
New York, Dec. 6.—Rev. Dr. Daniel Ayres Goodsell, resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, died at his residence following an operation for a carbuncle.

SWITCHMEN TO MAKE DEMANDS.

All Union Men Between Chicago and Buffalo May Strike.

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 6.—Authority to call a strike of all union switchmen between Buffalo and Chicago, if such a course is deemed necessary, is vested in a committee of the union, which will go to Chicago to negotiate with the general managers of the 19 railroads for a settlement of certain demands.

A referendum vote to get the sentiment of the organization and to give their committee a free hand was taken some time ago, according to Grand Vice-President Hunt, who is in charge of the Buffalo district.

The district east of Chicago includes not only Toledo, Port Wayne, Detroit and other important centers, but also takes in points as far south as Pittsburg, so that the ranks of the strikers will be increased by between 12,000 and 15,000 men if the negotiations fail.

MAN KILLS WIFE AND HIMSELF.

Crime Discovered by Cries of Couple's Baby Boy.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 6.—For 12 hours throughout the coldest night of the season, little Earl Campbell, two years old, was locked in an apartment in Kansas City, Kan., alone with the dead bodies of his father and mother, both evidently having been slain with the same weapon found in the dead man's hand.

The child's plight was discovered by neighbors, who had been disturbed all night by his crying, and who finally investigated. Forcing the door, they discovered that Joseph Campbell, 32 years old, had shot and killed his wife, MYRA.

TAFT APPROVES KNOX'S PLAN.

Secretaries of Legations Must Pass Qualifying Examination.

Washington, Dec. 6.—To improve the personnel and efficiency of the diplomatic service and to encourage secretaries of legations to qualify for promotion to the rank of ministers, President Taft has approved a plan suggested by Secretary Knox and published today as an executive order.

The new project provides for a board of examiners to pass upon all applications for appointments as secretaries and prescribes the standard to be maintained.

National Civic Congress.

New York, Dec. 6.—In response to a call issued by the governors of the American Civic alliance, representatives of a large number of civic and educational organizations from all parts of the country met here today in a civic congress that is to last until Saturday night. Men prominent in all walks of life have come to help consider and devise a means for co-ordinating civic activities throughout the country, and also to plan more effective methods of studying and solving municipal problems. The gathering is non-partisan, and the opening session was presided over by Henry Clow, the New York banker, who is chairman of the board of governors of the alliance.

Plan to Assassinate Kaiser.

Berlin, Dec. 6.—An anarchist weekly, the Freie Arbeiter, says the sudden arrests at Breslau last week on the occasion of Emperor William's visit to Cardinal Kopp were due to the discovery of a plot to assassinate the emperor, in which plot one Novek was supposed to be the ringleader.

THE great adjustment sale for cash only is one of the greatest money saving events and one of the biggest benefits to the public of recent years. Everything is plainly marked with the regular selling price and the special sale price so that you can make your own selections if you so desire. We have conducted some mighty big successful sales during the past few years, but we want to say to you that for quick, appreciative response, this adjustment sale eclipses them all. Every article in the store aside from linen collars is affected and our intention of reducing stock quickly in the adjustment of the affairs connected with the estate of the late T. J. Ziegler is meeting up splendidly.

Here is a season's new stock with winter and holidays just beyond and an opportunity to save enough in your necessary purchases to make the buying of additional stuff which you had thought out of your reach this year. You will find everything just as represented and plenty of every stock to fit almost any size person. We advise your quick attention and immediate action.

This is not a closing out sale—business will be conducted the same as usual. It's a quick reduction and the prices quoted will hold good throughout the entire period. If by any possibility an error should be made, it will be rectified with you.

AVOID HARSH DRUGS

Many Cathartics Tend to Cause Injury to the Bowels

If you are subject to constipation, you should avoid strong drugs and cathartics. They only give temporary relief and their reaction is harmful and sometimes more annoying than constipation. They in no way effect a cure and their tendency is to weaken the already weakened bowels with which they come in contact.

We honestly believe that we have the best constipation treatment ever devised. Our faith in it is so strong that we sell it on the positive guarantee that it shall not cost the user a cent if it does not give entire satisfaction and completely remedy constipation. This preparation is called REXAL. It is a mild, pleasant, and effective in action. They are made of a recent chemical discovery. Their principal ingredients are: castor oil, and colorless, combined with other well known ingredients, long established for their usefulness in the treatment of constipation. It forms a tablet which is eaten just like candy. They may be taken at any time, either day or night, without fear of their causing any inconvenience whatever. They do not grip, purge, or cause nausea. They act without causing any pain or excessive looseness of the bowels. They are ideal for children, weak, delicate persons and aged people as well as for the most hearty person.

They come in two size packages, 12 tablets 14 cents, 36 tablets 35 cents. Remember you can obtain them only at our store—The Rexal Store, The Smith Drug Co.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Do you get all the pleasure in life you can get out of the little things? So many people don't. And it's such a big mistake.

The great happiness of life of course comes from the big things—the thrill of a new found love, the fulfillment of some great ambition, the attainment of some long-cherished desire. But these big things do not come often into the most favored lives, and every day happiness must be founded on little things as well as on the hope and expectation of the larger things.

No simple little pleasure on the highway of life is too small to be worthless.

Do you think you enjoy all of them for all they are worth?

For instance, to be very prosaic, do you think you get all the happiness you might out of a good meal?

To live to eat is, of course, disgusting, but I do not think it is the best way to merely eat to live.

I know a man who is so absorbed in his work that unless he were reminded of it, he would often neglect to eat!

When he does eat he does it mechanically, hardly knowing what he is eating, and takes no pleasure at all in it.

His admirers think that this indifference to his physical needs shows great spirituality and is something to be much lauded.

I don't.

To be completely absorbed by the demands and sensations of the body is wrong, of course, but to completely ignore them and the pleasure we might get out of them is also wrong.

Why were we given the sense of taste unless we were meant to get pleasure as well as nutriment from our food?

Do you get all the pleasure you might from your walk to the train in the morning? Do you teach yourself how to get the most happiness possible out of a beautiful display in a florist's window, your favorite tune played by a good harpist, the sight of a thoroughly pretty girl, the unexpected meeting with an old friend, the reading of an unusually good story, or any one of a hundred little things that, if you let them, will help fill up the chinks in your life?

Perhaps you are young now and can dare to despise these things.

There are such vast possibilities in most young lives that young people seldom appreciate the value of little things.

But some day, when you are older and life is less crowded, I think you will realize the value of knowing how to get some of your happiness from the little everyday things, and will wish you had made it a habit in your youth instead of waiting till an age when habits are hard to acquire.

If you are a bit inclined to think this is childish philosophy, please wait before you judge, and read what a far, far wiser philosopher than I said in much the same vein:

"I once gave a lady two and twenty recipes against melancholy: one was a bright one; another to remember all the pleasant things said to and of her; another to keep a box of sugar plums on the chimney piece and a little stammering on the hob. I thought this was trifling at the moment, but have, in after life, discovered how true it is that these little pleasures often banish melancholy better than higher or more exalted objects; that no means ought to be thought too trifling that opposes it either in ourselves or others."—Suffey Suffolk.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Dec. 6.—During the last few years the silk blouse has been under a cloud. There seemed to be no middle ground between the lingerie blouse and the sheer, drowsy blouse of chiffon, not lace and other similar materials. But now the designers are bringing the despised silk blouse once more to the front, and while a majority of the drowsy costume blouses are still in sheer materials, innumerable smart models in crepe, cachemire, de sole, fulle, moire and other more or less substantial silks are seen.

These silk blouses are not, however, constructed on the old shirtwaist lines. These are reserved chiefly for the tub blouses. The silk model of the best type is simple of line, a distinctly tailored affair harmonizing with the tailored coat and skirt with which it is to be worn, but it must have some original and distinctive touch which will set it apart from the commonplace blouse shoddily made and sold by the hundred.

Cachemire de sole is a favorite of the blouse-makers because, while it has body, it is very light in weight and lends itself readily to tucks and draping. It may be obtained in all of the most colorful and shimmings, and that almost any suit material can be matched in it. Revolving the silk cachemire are the crepes—moire, cachemire, helene and a dozen others which are all softly lustrous, supple, and despite their light weight calculated to render excellent service. On these crepes and on the silk cachemire a little hand embroidery done in the color of the material adds immensely to the effectiveness of the blouse, and a little hand-brading is also effective. The latter can, of course, be obtained more cheaply than the embroidery, and often good results are obtained by using soutache or other braid in a fashion so simple that any seamstress can apply it.

Very simple little chiffon blouses for wear with tailored suits are made in chiffon to match the coat and skirt, laid in vertical tucks or pin tucks alternating with quarter-inch tucks. This tucked chiffon is laid over cream lace and is untrimmable save for an inch band of self-colored satin finishing the neck at the throat line or a little below and running down the left front where the blouse fastens. Little satin buttons and loops are set along the opening and a plaited frill of the chiffon falling over a soft frill of the cream lace finishes the edge of the covering front. The sleeves have a tiny undersleeve or cuff of lace at the wrist with a narrow band of satin finishing the oversleeve. There is a satin girdle and a little gimp of the creamy lace.

Frills and jabots are introduced upon many of the tailored blouses, and if not in creamy lace or net or fingerless are in chiffon matching the blouse material, with perhaps an under frill of white plaited chiffon or lace. Many of these frills run down the side front, the blouse opening down this line, but other models open frankly down the front, and the frills too take the con-

The number of such frills, with or without stock attached, which the shops display, is legion, and although some of them are expensive, others, quite as daintily effective, are comparatively reasonable in price. In almost every case the blouse is relieved by white at the neck. The day of the one-piece bodice is mercifully past. The best looking blouse models, however, have the shallowest of transparent gimpes, the body of the blouse often extending quite up to the base of the throat, so that only the transparent collar shows, exposing but a few inches of white gimpes. The blouse material below may be cut away and filled in with self-colored net, chiffon, lace or other dark transparency, through which bold colored embroidery or gold lace gleams vaguely.

A fashionable dressmaker on Fifth avenue is now displaying in his parlors a number of afternoon gowns elaborate in fur gimpes. The materials are cashmere, mouseline, de sole and cashmere combined and soft linings. On a light green cashmere there is a band of skunk at the knees and another at the hem of the skirt. The skunk ends that dangle at the side of the corsage employ narrow strips of the same fur, likewise the neck of the bodice. The sleeves have fur cuffs so deep that they resemble small muffs. Cashmere de sole is the material forming the body of another fascinating costume. The color is watermelon pink and the fur embellishments are sable. A narrow band of this rich fur edges the tunic which is cut to hang like shawl drapery, high at one side and nearly to the hem of the skirt on the other. The bodice is made of a draped scarf, with long ends falling in front; these are finished with sable tails. The yoke, collar and undersleeves are of Irish lace dyed to match.

Shadow lace is something new, and because of its unobtrusive pattern it can be used in great quantities without fear of over-decoration. The pattern is woven in such a way that an uncertain, shadowy effect is produced. It is especially lovely in black and cream. The black shadow lace is used over black net and a white satin undersleeve, while the cream is particularly effective over pale tints in evening gowns.

For young girls white is always appropriate, and nowadays the limited purse of mother need not detract from the most perfect of party frocks. Many inexpensive white materials are being utilized; white washable silks, velvets and cashmeres wear well and stand the test of frequent visits to the cleaners. Japanese silks are soft and pleasing when made on simple girlish lines. The newest frocks of this material are made in short and sensible round length skirts, which fall in full lines from deep belts of satin ribbon. The bodices are gathered into semi-circular yokes of lace, and little puffed sleeves are all that is required. Another dainty frock for a young girl is carried out in white point de esprit over silk or satin, with three or five ruffles bordering the hem of the skirt. A quilling or ruffling of satin is used to produce a dainty standing-out effect. The bodice is of net draped in frilled lines in a pleated effect, and these ruffles, edged as those on the skirt, are caught in front above the skirt with a huge white chon or rose. Short transparent sleeves are edged at the elbow with tiny ruffles.

Dress collars are shown in two extremes. They either clasp the neck to the ears or are extremely low. Some are cut out in the front and filled in there with a net or a series of narrow straps. The same idea is also carried out in ruffles, and the ruche in several instances is cut out across the front, as if to accommodate the chin. This may be comfortable for the person having a double chin, but few who have not will care to suggest the presence of one by adopting a ruche of this sort.

The lavens or washers-woman overdress is much used with hidden crepe dresses for afternoon wear, also for cashmere gowns and those of chiffon cloth. But there are many indications, besides its unsuitability for the average figure, that such overdresses will not remain in fashion for very long.

Buckles have come to the front, side and back of this season's hats in forms that depart from the metal shapes of a few years ago, and these immense ornaments are also used to hold every kind of material. It is the buckle that makes the hat in many instances.

Old rose is reappearing this year. At present, with few exceptions, it seems to be confined to waist garments or hat trimmings or, at most, to a net or chiffon overdress, but little clouds of bows of this tone in satin or velvet are frequently set upon darker or lighter toned fabrics.

Two Views Of a Simple Skirt.

A stylish but simple separate skirt suitable for wear with tailored skirts or under long separate coats is a necessary part of one's wardrobe. A happy suggestion for such a one is given herewith. Both a back and a front view are given, as the cut is novel and smart. The skirt is cut with three gores and a closely fitting upper portion finished with a wide hem at the bottom and rows of liberty ribbon matching the girdle has the effect of drawing the skirt back quite tightly below the hips.

CONSERVATION IDEA HAS HIT MINNESOTA

Natural Resources Are to Be Safeguarded in This One State at Least.

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 6.—State conservation of natural resources in Minnesota is to become a practical reality at one of the largest conventions ever held in the Northwest, which will occur in midwinter, Governor A. O. Elbertson is behind the movement and has already appointed a state conservation commission backed by the powerful state federation of commercial clubs, which is actively planning for a session attended by 2,000 delegates. Every class of employment in the state, every profession, every branch of commercial and industrial effort and every line of public work will be represented at Saint Paul in a three days covering what Minnesota has in the way of resources, what is to be done with them and how they are to be developed without waste.

Governor Elbertson has shown the subject of vagueness and the usual visionary trimmings by declaring that Minnesota has cheap waterpower and should furnish power to its people at low rate, that the rivers of the state are intended for commerce and should be utilized as elements of competition and in moving the traffic of the state, that the state has been denuded of much timber at tremendous waste and loss and that this should stop and should be replaced by sane forestry, that too much land is in the hands of speculative holders who must be forced to drop it and permit its settlement by agriculturalists. He voices several other ideas which are equally pleasant to the powerful railway, timber and power interests. The conservation idea has been taken up with enthusiasm not only by the state but by the departments at Washington which are extending cordial assistance and have promised to send to Minnesota the best men in the United States to help the state get on its feet and stop the waste and bring about the rapid development of its resources.

Minnesota has 84,000 square miles of territory and is tremendously rich in timber, ore, power, clays, stone, sands suitable for manufacture, and other valuable assets. The coming congress will devote its most important work to the analysis and cataloging of these resources and work designed to bring the material assets of the state to the attention of eastern money and manufacturing brains, able to utilize and develop them. Immense drainage works must be installed to improve the lands of the northern section of the state and this work it is estimated will add an area equal to the entire acreage of the famous Red River valley to the productive wheat lands of the state. Minnesota has greater coal deposits than any other state of the union, but they are lying idle and no work has yet been done except by James J. Hill to develop them. Mr. Hill's efforts halted with the sale of his northern ore lands to the steel trust.

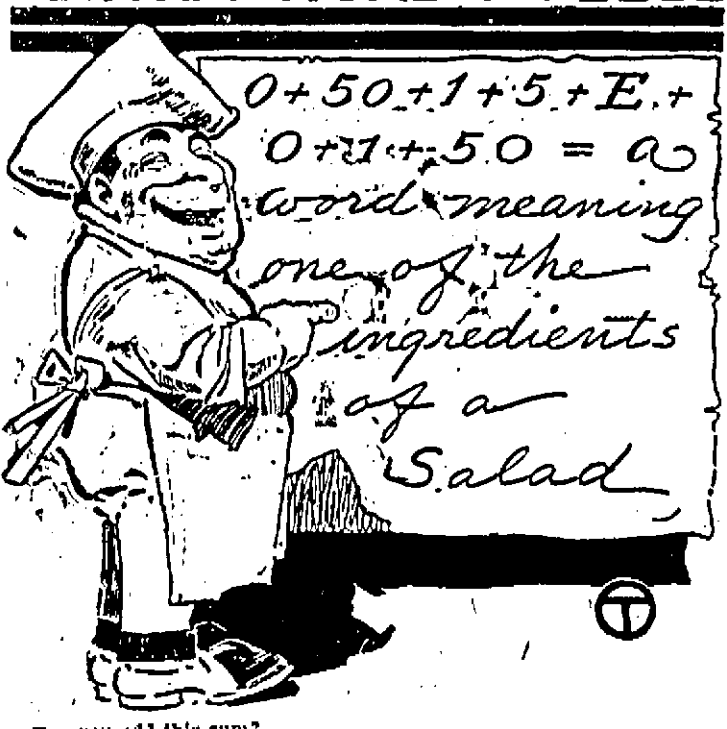

The state conservation commission will meet in Saint Paul with a congress to settle upon a date for the congress and formally pass upon the handling of commissions to delegates. Governor Elbertson leaves within a few days to visit the leaders of conservation thought at Washington and close arrangements with them for their presence at the Minnesota session. Funds to handle the congress came so easily that a sufficient amount was subscribed in a single evening at a dinner of twenty-five officers and leaders in Minnesota commercial club work.

of man's nobility and his worthiness of the promise of Life Everlasting."—Extract from William H. Dougherty's address at Elks' Memorial service.

Members of Janesville Lodge No.
251, P. O. E., and their friends gathered at the Myers theatre Sunday afternoon to pay tribute to the honored dead. The 1909 roll of the departed, including the names of Joseph M. Hostwick who passed away on January 24, George H. Hale who received the last summons on February 27, and Martin G. Curle who died on June 11, was the largest for a single year in the history of the lodge.

Following an intermezzo from Maccagnoli by the Janesville Symphony orchestra, led by Prof. J. S. Taylor, the happiest memorial ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Joseph C. Hazen and the other officers of the lodge. The Lotus Male quartette, composed of Prof. Taylor, E. E. Van Pool, Alton
P. Lovejoy, and Arthur Schoof, gave a very beautiful rendition of "Our Absent Ones," and the entire lodge, standing, gave the sign of sorrow as Rev. Joseph C. Hazen came forward to offer the invocation.

Attorney William H. Dougherty delivered the address of the afternoon.
Though the subject matter was necessarily sombre, the treatment was sun-drenched, serene, and hopeful. It was a calm, reflective consideration of the philosophy of life, soft-spoken and modest in the delivery, and one of the finest layman's sermons which a Janesville audience has heard for many a day. The full text was as follows:

W. H. Dougherty's Address
"Ladies and Gentlemen: We are gathered here today under the auspices of this great order of Elks, to commemorate those of its members who have laid aside the affairs of this life and entered upon the broader life eternal. We are asked here because these men were once our friends, as well as members of this fraternity and further because the consideration of life and death, their relation one to the other, and their attendant responsibilities is a wholesome thing for the living.

"In the stress of our daily affairs
we are apt to reflect but little upon these matters, and then only in an impersonal way. Our common impression of death, or at least what might be termed our working conception of it, does not seem to fully recognize law but rather as something that by way of chance, accident, and mystery touches an acquaintance or a friend. At other times we may behold it as a grim and ruthless specter, leveling all our aims and aspirations, as something fraught with terror, dismay and defeat. But just as truly as it is universal, it is not a thing of terror. How can a creature standing upon which we dwell so calmly in retrospection, be considered as a calamity in nature? Is it not the truth that many of life's fondest memories and noblest inspirations trace a sacred path to an unremembered call?
Vain regrets are not always with us.
Time reconciles the will and in its passing leaves us with a broader and more hopeful view. While the thought of death is something that the mind embraces with reluctance yet it is not too much to say that its greatest dread lies in its accompaniment. In reality it is accompanied with a power and fortitude that raises it to the sublime. The world's strongest men and women, those who by their wisdom and virtue have been privileged to confer the greatest good, have met this problem without fear or doubting and in such a manner as to dig-nify mankind. By their resignation they have given evidence of man's nobility
and his worthiness of the promise of Life Everlasting.

"I will not assume the right to speak or offer advice upon the moral aspects of life, for I am conscious of such limitations in that regard, as would strip my words of force and make a hollow mockery of a sacred theme. No man should seek to lead in this respect, save him who speaks with authority and whose example wholly exemplifies the principles he teaches and thus inspires his hearers against the baneful consequences of hypocrisy.

"There are, however, certain gentle qualities of great worth and great attainment, which go far toward making our lives worthy and which contribute immeasurably to the happiness of our friends. It is in the cultivation and practice of these homely virtues, that we render our full share of service and accept with credit, the responsibilities of life. Our greatest fault, I believe, is not in failing to observe the larger law, but in failing to improve the little opportunities that each day offers. Who can estimate the value of the kindly spoken word of encouragement, or of a necessary correction, gently made; or a friendly interest in someone's working with a generous eye and finally just a little kindness toward all who pass our way. These small seeds, if properly sown, may come to bloom in a great heart and free it of a gloomy burden. They change the whole prospect of life; they clear aside the clouds of discouragement and despair and reveal to the weary traveler the strengthening rays of hope.

"We, as a people respond most nobly in the greater emergencies, but as individuals, either through thought-lessness or a fear of misconception,
we leave many small but helpful deeds undone. The chief tendency of our time, no doubt, is bent toward great development and achievement in trade and industry. Men quite naturally associate themselves together,
solely for reasons of policy and profit,
while the ever-widening field of endeavor is not so productive of a friendly interest, as in days gone by,
when the personal element played a stronger part; and owing to this very tendency there has never been a time when the gospel of helpfulness had a stronger appeal, nor promised greater returns. We need not halt an instant in our march of wealth and splendor, but we must take better care of men, that their hearts shall not be sacrificed as we move along;
let the cold steel of worldly power be softened by the gentle touch of kindness and life will respond in generous measure with its richest gifts. Farthermore we can well afford to be more tolerant, one of another. Surely, if it takes nothing of strength from one's belief, to show a fair respect for the sincere conviction of another,
that there is too much of bitterness in the life of our day. Is a generally admitted fact. We will do well to remember that anger and violence have really played but a small part, in the cause of truth and justice. We could profitably abandon many of our angry controversies and be a sensible and operation promote the general well-fare.

"With a realization of present conditions there must come a change in our attitude toward life. The inquiry of the new generations will be, 'How can I render the highest service?'
rather than 'How can I reap the greatest gain?' What does it matter if our wealth increases in magic numbers if it doesn't do the greatest good? What glory is there in a power that is flaunted with pride? A proud people become a harsh and brutal people. Intolerance is a natural attribute of selfish pride and it cannot be argued, if once a virtue, that we would furnish an exception to the rule. Let us always know and keep in mind that there is nothing in the world's experience to prove that real progress can ever be had at the sacrifice of honor, truth
and justice.

"The practice of these simple virtues makes no impossible demands upon us. They call for no high degree of perfection. A sacrifice of no kind is demanded. Nothing is asked further than that each perform his simple duty toward the other and all their duty to their country. It can be said, I think, that the things we cherish most in our friends, whose memory we honor here today, are those very qualities, and was it not through the possession of these qualities that they gained the noble crown of remembrance. Long after their achievements of hand and mind have been forgotten
we will continue to remember them
for their deeds of kindness and their kind heart with ours.

"These are the same virtues that have prompted the greatest deeds of heroism and self-sacrifice; through them thousands of noble men and women have been led to glory, their talents and their lives, as well, their liberty and just reward, triumph over tyranny and injustice. And while the fruit of their labor has proven a glorious benefit and blessing, it has brought its responsibilities as well.
We are charged with the duty of fostering these great principles that no backward step shall ever be taken,
let us hope that our children shall be the promised land, where the weak shall not suffer at the hands of the strong; where peace and harmony shall ever reign among our countrymen; a nation of honest men and women with lives dedicated to the cause of truth and justice.

"As we come to accept these well-known principles in their fullness we will justify the claim that we are a chosen people and by our lives we will advance the cause of an all-wise providence, slowly but surely working out a divine destiny—the achievement
of the 'land among men.'"

Rev. Joseph C. Hazen, in opening his address, reminded his hearers of the remarkable eulogy "delivered at similar services a year ago by one who was admired and loved by all who knew him regardless of their affiliations." And by allusions similar to those which had brought the late Pa-ther L. J. Vaughn to mind he touched gently upon the other losses which both the community and lodge had sustained during the year which is soon to close. He pictured a homecoming on high where the wayfarer
would be received with the same kindly, personal welcome as awaited
him in earthly lodge halls, and closed
with the narration of the allegorical story of the gift that was pleasing to God and made the chimera of heaven
real.

The Sextette from "Lucia and Schumann's "Trauerlied" were some of the numbers admirably played by the orchestra and the ceremonies
closed with the lodge ritual, the recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the quartette, and a benediction by Rev.
Mr. Hazen.

BUT FEW DAYS ARE LEFT FOR LETTERS

All Santa's Little Friends Must Write
Before Next Saturday—He Wants to Hear From All.

Santa's mail is getting heavy.
Soon his presents will be ready.
Those who wish to write must hurry.
And mail their Xmas letters early.

By Saturday, next, all of Santa's little friends must have their letters in his mail bag if they are to go to the frozen north where he lives. Many have already sent or brought their requests for gifts to the dear old fellow and others will probably hasten to do so this week. Be sure and write on one side of the paper only; either print your letters or write as plainly as you can and if you mail them put
a two-cent stamp on the envelope.

Perhaps you do not know, but Santa and his reindeer have a long trip before them. He must visit every little boy and girl who believes in him on the eve before Christmas. The pack must be a very large one to hold everything that everybody wishes, but some way or other he manages to have gifts for all. Sticks and dolls, and tool boxes and horns, and candy and swords and drums. He has lots of things in his big storehouse at his home way up north and he is happy to bring them out for the pleasure of his little boys and girls.

Do not forget to write this week and write plainly, addressing your letters care of the Gazette if you want them to go in his mail bag.

EDWARD COURTNEY
STRUCK BY TRAIN

Near C. & N. W. Freight Depot Saturday Night—Has Regained Consciousness and May Recover.

Edward Courtney, for some time past employed as switch-tender at the new C. & N. W. yards, was struck down by a North-Western passenger train arriving here from Chicago about 7:30 Saturday evening, rolled under the locomotive pilot, and picked up in a badly battered and unconscious condition. Russell's ambulance conveyed him to the hospital where Dr. W. H. Palmer attended him. His scalp and face were badly cut but it could not be ascertained that the skull was fractured or any bones broken. At a late hour Sunday afternoon he was still in a comatose state but reports this morning were to the effect that he had recovered consciousness and that hopes were entertained for his ultimate recovery. The unfortunate man was walking on the track
just north of the freight depot and in the heavy fog and rainstorm failed to notice the approaching train. The passenger was in charge of Conductor J. J. Duffin. Mr. Courtney was at one time janitor at the Janesville school.

MONROE TEAM BEAT
WHITEWATER QUINTET

Basketball Five of Co. H. Victorious
Over Co. C's Team
28 to 12.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Monticue, Wis., Dec. 6.—The first game of basketball to be played in the armory this season was won by Co.
H. in a game between the first team
of the latter and C. C. of Whitewater.
The score at the end of the first half stood 12 to 10 in favor of the Monroe team, and in the last half they built their score up to 28, while Whitewater failed to make a basket. The "Trickle boys and Roy Clayton, famous in football, were equally good in basketball.
A preliminary played between the Stars, composed of Cardinal and high school members, and the second team of Co. H., was won by the former team by a score of 24 to 2.

The next game of the season will be played next Friday evening between the Cardinals and the first behavior team. The Cardinals have hitherto been considered the strongest team in the city, and no doubt the game will be a fast and snappy one.
The preliminary will be between the Monroe high school girls and the Platteville high school girls.

The Optimist's Corner
Daily Helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE R. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

It doesn't pay to slight your work. The "good enough" sort is in distressing evidence everywhere. You can see it in the irregular and tottering wall or in that crumbling cement that makes pretense of holding it together; in the crumpled weather-boarding of the house, in the faded dress and shining coat, the new tin pail with a hole in the bottom, the cheap paint put on when you paid for good, the five stitches to the inch where there ought to be ten, in the slipshod sermon of the preacher who gives you words when you pay for ideas, the lawyer who singles the niceties of your case,
the doctor who looks at your tongue when he ought to question your habits and revert to your ancestors to find out what ails you. You should have a just pride in the accomplishment of something a little more skillfully, a trifle more dexterously than your fellows. You will win just such place in the esteem of the world—acquire just such renown as you shall earn by the dexterity, the skill,
the talent, you acquire and practice in your chosen profession—
in the place you find yourself.
If you do no better work than your fellow you will not thrust your head above the level, and it will be your own fault.

CHAPTER VII.

The Baseline Fabric.
True philosophy is ascetic. It may be practiced under conditions in which the material is in abeyance. It exalts the spiritual. It is distinguished by indifference to environment. There is nothing so fatal to its profession as extravagance. Frugality is to the philosopher what modesty is to a woman—the essential thing without which it and she cease to be.

The atmosphere into which Katherine Brenton was suddenly plunged by her bold step was the very antithesis of these requirements. It was unhealthy, and like unhealthy air it bred disaster. She had been trained to independence of conditions, to disregard of circumstances, as well as to disdain of restraint; but there was that within her surroundings which, from her first experience of them, she felt instinctively to be vitiating, which tended to deprave, which precluded the exercise of clear, unimpaired mentality. Especially in her case was this true since the luxury with which she had been surrounded appealed so subtly to the preponderant, and it must be admitted, immortal feminine in her composition. Sex distinction, sex difference was the one thing against which she fought. Sex equality was the supreme good to be desired in her scheme of right relationships between the individual and the universe. While she rebelled against her sex, yet she recoiled in it. Glad was she sometimes on that very account that to her was given the opportunity to prove her superiority to the limitations, disabilities and man-made trammels of womanhood.

Horn of two fanatics on the same subject, whose insanity was modified and mollified by brilliancy of intellect in every other field of investigation and experiment, Katherine Brenton had been trained to the hour for her profession, for the exploitation of her principles. The greatest of universal principles pointed to her with peculiar pride as one of the children of the free; free from everything in thought and determined to be free from everything in action. Much was expected from her and the world was not disappointed at the first result of her mental labor. There were certain old-fashioned people who deplored the perversion of so much talent and even genius to the defense of error, but these did not count. The world bought her book in thousands, read it avidly and regarded it as the last word of the last woman of the end of the age on the sex problem. Cleverly disguising her philosophy in the form of science, the world of woman kept her pure and sweet and lovable—these in spite of, not because of, her perverse and perverted philosophy. Though she defied convention in its spirit, she was naturally subject to it in its exercise. For instance, to her the marriage bond was, indeed, a bond; the marriage vow a confession of weakness—on the part of the woman, at least—and the marriage relation an acknowledgment of inferiority—again on the part of the woman. She would have none of these things in her life. Yet, as she thought, she had given her heart to a man—alas, the submission to the eternal law!—and although their relationship was sanctified by nothing but their affection, it was to her as pure and as holy a thing as if the contract had been witnessed and blessed by a thousand priests. What was it to him? She counted without the other sex. Many other women unfortunately have done the same.

Not content with the writing of books, her intense devotion to her cause, coupled with her unflagging energy, had found vent upon the lecture platform. The curious crowded to her feet at once, so bold, so radical, so beautiful and so innocent. One of her first converts had been the only son of a multi-millionaire, bygone human king of the Pacific slope. His conversion was not so much an effort of pure reason as of primal passion, although that fact was in no wise apparent to her. She would find that out later. This modern Hypatia, skilled in the learning of the schools, burning with exhaustless zeal, permeated with fiery energy, was yet as innocent in some ways as any of her humbler sisters. As that good book which she disdained in the power illuminations which had come to her, might have said of her, she was in the world but not of it.

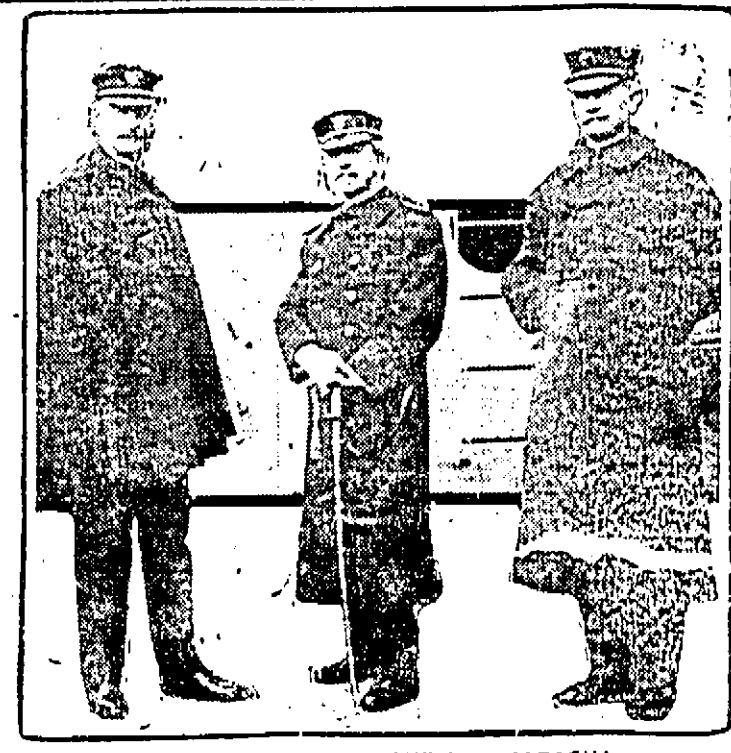

Unconsciously she fulfilled many injunctions of him who had said but known it was the greatest of philosophers. Naturally she kept herself unspotted from the world. Yet when the young man who had engaged her affections proposed to her that they should put her theories in practice, after some hesitation she had acceded to his proposition. It was a species of self-immolation not far from her ideal that made her consent. Indeed, she did not realize how heroic it was. With no other ceremony than a clasp of the hand and an unspoken, wordless promise of trust, devotion, single-hearted alliance, publicly and before God and man, without a thought for the one and with no full realization of the thoughts of the other—at least on her part—they had gone away together, hand in hand; and she who since Eve mated with Adam in the dawn of the world's first morning.

Yet there has never been an Eden of which man has known without its serpent. In the cabin of that gorgeous yacht, Satan's rearer his head. The first week or so of the adventure had been filled with idyllic happiness, happiness so great that it was strong enough to quiet certain low, still, small voices of conscience which the woman rightly ascribed to a strange atavism of ancient prejudice to which her philosophy was no unequal.

However, such conditions did not long persist. Her disciple was inclined, presently she found to her sorrow, to take a somewhat lower view of the situation than suited her own high-souled views. The ardor of her devotion cooled as his passion increased. Shut up in the narrow confines of a ship—great and splendid though this yacht was beyond imagination—little characteristics hereof unsuspected developed in the mere man. The course of true love was not so smooth as the summer seas over which they sailed. The air in which they lived was ruffled by surges in which experience would have found presage for coming deeper storm. The image that had fed of clay sought for similar earthly alloy in the companion image which was made of pure gold all through, and finding it not, resented it desperately. The convert having gained his desire, weakened in his principles. There was no relaxation in his devotion, in his tenderness, in anything outward and visible, but the high philosophy which had made the joint effort almost a self-sacrifice of demonstration was slowly vanishing from one heart while the other clung the more tenaciously to it.

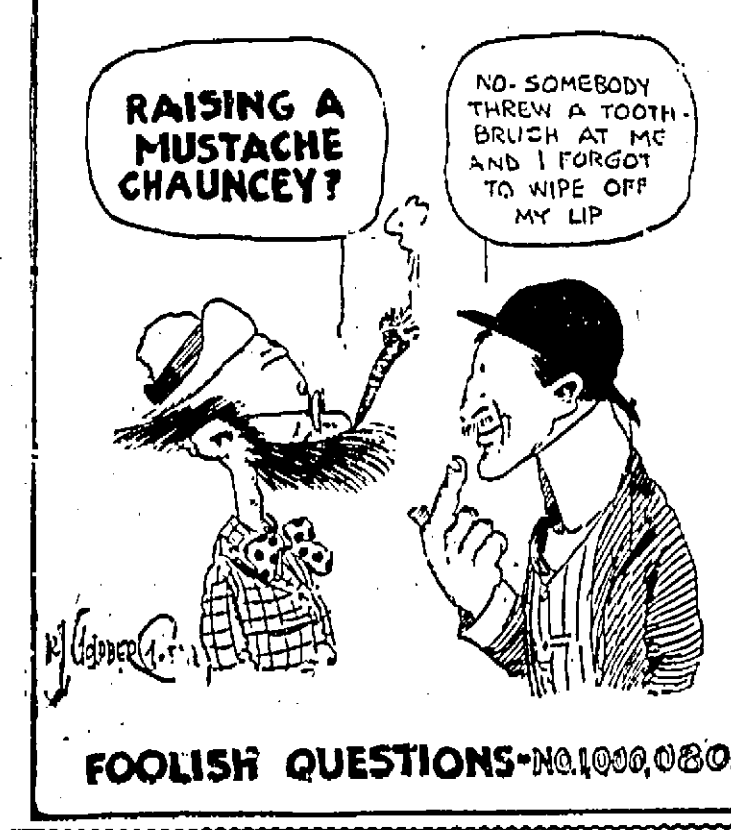

It was the old, old story. In a little the catapaw developed into the tempest. When it appeared it came with surprising swiftness. The woman found that in neither abstract thought nor mental speculation was there any protection for her. There might be no God in heaven, but there was a conscience in her breast. Finally she broke away from the man so far as she could do so when they were both in the same ship of which he was lord and master. She would have nothing more to do with him save that which common decency and the bare civilities of life demanded of her. Denied the privileges upon which he had counted, the man grew savage and showed the cloven foot. The disagreement became a quarrel. The quarrel ran through several phases. At first, then he had sworn again allegiance to the specious philosophy which she now realized he had only professed, consciously or unconsciously, that he might possess her. But she was not deceived. There was no truth in his words; his asseverations carried no conviction to her soul. Again he stormed and raged; once more he apologized and appealed, but the periods of calm grew shorter and the periods of storm grew longer and more vehement. The woman alone was steadfast. She was overwhelmed with shame, the horror of the situation was rising upon her.

She began to realize how helpless she was. Under the inspiration of a belief, which was as honest as it was mistaken, she had put herself in the power of this man. Even if she were ashore, there would be no one to whom she could appeal, and here on the ship she was helpless. Lingering remnants of better things had kept him from the last resort of the tyrant—force—but how long these would be operative in restraint she could not tell. She fancied not for long. What should she do then?

She saw the end coming when in his anger he resorted to drink, to drink which exploded the last vestige of his philosophy, however he had professed it. She was frightened beyond measure when she realized the depths to which he had sunk and to which, in spite of herself, he had dragged her. What further decent was before her? She did not even yet abandon that philosophy which had served her so ill. She clung to that with the more tenacious pride because of its very weakness, but she loathed mankind. On that yacht he summed up for her the whole human race, and she hated him and it. To what sorry pass had a few weeks' practical experience reduced her?

She had begged and pleaded with him to alter the yacht's course, but he had sworn he would go farther south into those unknown seas and keep her there until she crawled to his feet. So the long hours dragged on. The inevitable rupture drew nearer. At last it came. In its details it was horrible, but there was in it a great relief after all.
